COMMUNITY FACILITY GRANT PROGRAM

Rural Development Community Facilities programs provide opportunities to fund projects such as health care services, public safety, police and fire stations, adult and child day care, community, social or cultural services, purchase equipment, and to construct or relocate public buildings.

Program Details:

- Non-profits, Indian tribes, and public bodies (e.g., towns or counties) are eligible applicants.
- Eligible areas include unincorporated rural areas, cities, and towns with populations less than 20,000.
- Grant funds can be used for real estate and equipment
- Some examples of projects include clinics, shelters, public buildings, day care centers, fire stations, and fire trucks
- Grant funding may pay for 15 – 75% of the project cost depending on the communities' population, median household income, and need.
- Projects funded must serve areas where median household income (MHI) is below the higher of the poverty line or the eligible percentage (60-90% of state non-metro MHI).
- Colorado's total grant funds are limited and are distributed among grantees based on the ranking of the grantees' application.
